The first winter with my son was about a month and a half, but thanks to the sled stroller, I was able to make very enjoyable memories. Since I used it with my 7-month-old son, I can't hear the ride quality, but I used it by sitting with a cushion on his back in addition to the seat I borrowed. He sometimes fell asleep during the walk, so he feels comfortable. I think it is a necessary item for a snowy country.

Good points

- It was much easier than walking and shopping with a hug, and I enjoyed walking.
- When I put a child on a normal sled, I often look back because I am worried, but it is not necessary.
- Without a car, the range of activities will be narrowed in winter, but if you have a sled stroller, you can go without hesitation.

Improvement points

- When I first operated it, I didn't know how to do it. From the second time onward, I was able to operate it smoothly with my feet.
- Because there is nothing to protect the child, I am worried about the coldness of the child's body.
- There is no problem with the subway, but it is difficult for parents to get on the bus alone. (Because the main body is heavy)
- I couldn't put my luggage on it, and if I bought too much, it was difficult to push the sled while carrying a large luggage.
- If the sidewalk is narrow, it will get in the way of passersby.
- If I pull a normal sled, I can check the surroundings by walking first, but pushing the sled is a little worrisome because the child riding the sled will move ahead of me. I couldn't see ahead when there was a high snowy mountain, and when I crossed the road, I went while peeking. Also, I was a little worried that I couldn't see the child's face.

Others

Like a rear-view mirror, I came up with the idea of attaching a smartphone with an in-camera so that the child's face can be seen. I actually tried it on my smartphone, but the mirror I had at home was a perfect fit, so the photo is a mirror version. After all, I was a little relieved when I could see the child's face.

Like a car, my boy was in a good mood when he was moving and almost slept, but when he stopped, he cried and had a hard time, so I had a hard time waiting for traffic lights and shopping.

Many people of all ages, men and women, said, "There are useful things," "It's nice to be sledging," and "Baby looks fun."

Customers feedback 2

I used it to pick up and drop off at the nursery center almost every day. The child on board is a child under one and a half years old (weight 10KG). Since my children go to different nurseries, we walk 1.5 kilometers one way to pick up and drop off. So a stroller that can be used even in winter was an essential item. People tend to think that it is better to use a hugging strap, but since I have a slight backache, a long-distance hugging strap is physically difficult, there is a lot of luggage at the time of transportation, it is dangerous if I slip on a snowy road, Due to such circumstances, the need for a stroller was very high.

Good points

- Most importantly, it made going out in winter much easier (less depressing).
- It is narrower than I expected (as narrow as a regular stroller) and easy to use in town.
- The design is not embarrassing on the streets! (With the foot cover, it looks like a regular stroller)
- I rode the subway. It is stable in the subway if you lift the wheels after you get in.
- I was impressed that the body of the sled is much lighter than I imagined, and it is easier to assemble and fold than the stroller around it.
- When I pushed the sled out onto the road, I was surprised at how light it ran. Compared to ordinary sleds where the entire bottom surface is in contact, pipe sleds have only a thin ski-like plate with a contact surface, so the lightness is completely different!

Improvement points

To be honest, I personally helped so much that there is nothing wrong with it, but I noticed it, and if this is the case, it's even better! & I will describe it from the viewpoint that it will be a hint when improving something in the future.

- From January to early March, which is the high season of snow, it was necessary to cover it because there was intermittent snowfall day and night.
- The position of the handle is slightly lower than that of a general stroller ⇒ If you press it for more than an hour, you will get tired. (Height 163 cm)
- Since the front wheels do not rotate 360 degrees, it is a little inconvenient to change direction.
- Since the pedal part for switching between sled and wheel is small, it is difficult to kick with rugged winter shoes such as SOREL. (Since the shoes are big, it feels like you're stuck in a space with pedals)

The magnitude of the vibration caused by the unevenness of the snowy road was unexpectedly large. My child was one and a half years old and was pleased with the vibration.

When I was using it, I was often the center of attention by people on the street. Elderly people, nursery school teachers, and mothers on the street said to me "There is such a convenient thing now!" I explained to them each time.

I put on a cover for a stroller on the market. I attached it with a stroller clip.
